But these estimable young ladies have positive qualifications of their own. We remember them as pupils in the Femals Ifigh School, before they went to Oxford. They were remurkably faithful and intelligent pupils; and such, generally, make successful instructors.

We hope that this school may be the germ of a large, well-endowed seminary in this garden spot of Kennacky. How easily, if they would, the wealthy cuit a zens of the tellightful locality could as a hundred thousand for such an enter prise. They would get back their money with interest even in the increased vain of their property.
